

Alt-Academic Job Workshop for Humanities Graduate Students

Jump-start your job search with proven strategies, support from mentors, and computer lab time to work on your materials

WEEKEND WORKSHOP
February 1 and 2, 2020
8-4 p.m. in 311 Denney Hall

RSVP REQUIRED: Please click here to RSVP: <http://bit.ly/302s4rf>

Sponsored by OSU Department of English and
The Center for the Humanities in Practice.
Grad students from all OSU humanities departments are welcome.

Free lunch and light breakfast for participants.
Your laptops and tablets welcomed, but we'll also have loaner machines and access to computer labs.

What We'll Cover:

- Building your confidence
- Translating your academic skills for non-academic job markets
- Choosing a career field
- Recognizing relevant job titles
- Where to look for jobs
- How to read job ads—and know if you're qualified
- Networking strategies that work for introverts and extroverts
- LinkedIn and online portfolios
- Cover letters and resumes
- Job interviews and informational interviews
- How to negotiate salary and benefits

About the Facilitator: Jen Michaels turned her OSU English PhD work & an MFA in Creative Writing into a corporate career in learning strategy. She's worked at a startup, runs an online small business, and currently works as Learning Strategy Lead at Owens Corning. In this workshop, she'll share strategies that she and other humanities academics use to acquire alt-academic and non-academic jobs.