

Sunday, November 17, 11:00-1:00 p.m.

Hagerty Hall 255

Tandana Foundation and Visiting Guests from Ecuador and Mali

Please join us this Sunday, November 17 from 11:00 - 1:00 p.m. in Hagerty Hall 255 as Kawsay Ukhunchay Andean and Amazonian Indigenous Art Collection student curators and researchers welcome special guests from The Tandana Foundation for a tour of the collection and a conversation with visiting colleagues! All are welcome!

The Tandana Foundation has longstanding ties with Ohio. Anna Taft, originally from Columbus and a graduate of Whitman College, founded the organization in 1998. This autumn, she and community partners from Ecuador and Mali have been teaching workshops on Andean Worldview and Global Interactions at Whitman College, Miami University, University of Dayton, as well as various museums and public libraries throughout Ohio. Their next stop is Ohio State University this Sunday, Nov. 17!

Anna Taft will talk about her recently published book Climbing Together: Relational Morality and Meaningful Action in Intercultural Community Engagement \(Brill 2024\), which articulates the philosophy behind The Tandana Foundation's work.

Margarita Fureez, Tandana's first university scholarship recipient will share perspectives on Kichwa Otavalo ethics, worldview, and practices. Segundo Moreta, intercultural educator and author of the trilingual children's book Juanita the Colorful Butterfly, published by The Tandana Foundation, will share his latest book and his experiences putting interculturality into practice. They will also be joined by two colleagues from Mali, Moussa Tembiné, Tandana's in-country Director with a background in agronomy and community development, and Housseyni Pamateck, in-country Program Manager integral to Tandana's success in Mali.

Be sure to join us! We will have a student posted at the main entrance of the building (facing the Oval) to let folks in until 11:00 a.m. since buildings are locked on weekends
